FINANCIAL OPERATIONS. Weekly Bank Statement Is Regarded

As Favorable. New York, Dec. 10.—The weekly bank

New York, Dec. 19.—The weekly bank statement shows the following changes: Surplus reserve, decreased $1.55,550; localist, increased $1.55,069; specie increased $1.55,509; calls, increased $1.55,009; specie increased $1.55,509; calls, increased $1.55,009; specie increased $1.50,009; specie increased $1.50,009; specie increased $1.50,500; The banks now hold $15,761,300 in excess of the requirements of the 25 per cent rule.

The Pinancier cays: The statement of the Maw York clearing house banks for the week ending Dec. 19 Indicates an expansion of $1.561,900 in ionus and $1.202,200 in deposits. The increase in liabilities, however, as shown in the latter item, makes but little change in the total of the banks' reserves, the decrease amounting to about one-third of a million dollars. It is evidence that the loans have gone to swell banking credits, and incidentally decosits, the gain in cash partly making up for the discrepancy between the two items. The net increase in cash, in fact, very nearly supplied the added reserve requirement, and the statement is favorable from a banking standpoint. In that use has been found for all the money which came into the institutions last week.

As an exemplification of the theory of which came into the institutions last week.

As an exemplification of the theory of hanking operations outlined by the secretary of the treasury in his annual review last week, the current exhibit of the banks is peculiarly to the point. In detail the statement presents nothing that throws light on the current situation. The expansion in loans can be traced to three or four of the largest banks, and gains in deposits inve been limited for the most part to about the same number. It is evident that the loan increase has been due to sterling investments and collateral buying, sithough there is a steady absorption of commercial pages. The bosn due to starling investments and collateral buying, although there is a steady absorption of commercial paner. The actual position of the banks with respect to eash changes is at variance with estimates based unon the week's operations. Currency from the interior is moving this way, as is natural at this senson. The amount will be increased considerably as the January dividend period approaches. On the other hand, the banks are losing to the treasury about as much as they gain. The net increase of $1.400.000 in cash for the week, therefore, was interpreted. The seeming shifty of the banks to extend their operations in proportion to the excess cash received is an argument against lower rates, even if it does not forecast any degree of firmness.

The direction of the new loaus, however, is a motter of interest, As long as they are merely the tangible expression of deforred European credits, they are dependent on fractional exchange quotations, and are liable to suddon contraction. For this reason, it is difficult to judge the future of the money market. The only inference is that rates cannot go higher for more than a very brief spread of the money would almost immediately defeat itself through gold imports.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Unfavorable Crop Reports Caused

Unfavorable Crop Reports Caused Advance In Wheat.

Chicago, Dec. 10.—The opening in wheat was barely steady, though at a slight advance over yesteriany's closing prices. Crop reports from Argentine were again unfavorable, advices from there stating that wheat was being damaged by rains, but this was offset in a measure by the action of the Liverpool market, which showed a closing decline of about 4d. The weakness of the foreign murket was rather unexpected and held buying in check for a time. Besides the Liverpool decline, bears had to confront them a very favorable Michigan state crop report and a very limited export demand at the seaboard. Advices from the northwest, however, were practically unanimous in claiming that farmers' deliveries in that section were sure to fall off sharply next week.

In that section were sure to fall off sharply next week.

Shorts grew restive and covered extensively. Offseings were limited and a good deal of difficulty was experienced in covering large lines, the result being quite a sharp advance in prices during the first hour's trading. December showed the most strength. Later in the day the reports as to the Argentine crop were contradicted, but the effect this might have had was offset by reports from California, telling of high winds and hot, dry weather, necessitating a lot of replanting. Markets were all strong and this heiped to maintain prices. Toward the close, however, there was a good deal of realizing. The close was steady, with May 5c higher and an advance of 5c for December.

May 5c higher and an advance of 5c for December.

Corn was dull, but firm. Cables were unchanged and prices suggested a freer movement, but the wheat strength served to sustain prices. May closed 5c higher. In the main oats followed wheat and corn and for most of the session ruled firm and higher. The market cused off somewhat on Monday's rather liberal estimates and the favorable shipping weather. May closed a shade higher. There was a good trade in provisions and prices from the start were higher. The conditions were practically the same as for several days past. There was some covering by shorts, who did not like the strength of grain. At the close pork was 125c higher, lard 75c higher, and ribs 72-210c higher for the May option.

MISSISSIPPI FLOODS.

No Plan For Prevention Discovered By the Senators.

Washington, Dec. 10 .- The sub-committee of the senate emmittee on commerce, appointed to investigate the floods in the Mississippi under the res-olution of April 2, 1897, and to make recommendations for their prevention in the future, held a meeting today and practically agreed upon the form of the report to be made to the full committee. The sub-committee presented the results of its labors in a printed volume of over 500 pages, giving the testimony taken, together with several maps and illustrations pertinent to the work in hand.

The committee furnishes much practical information, and gives some interesting conclusions, but makes comparatively few recommendations. They discuss the reservoir and outlet system, and conclude that both are impracticable for the prevention of overflows on a big scale. The conclusion is reached that the improvement of South Pass to the extent necessary to render it deep product to recovered. enough to accommodate the largest modern ships is impracticable, in view largest modern snips is impracticable, in view of the expense, and the opinion is indi-cated that a southwest pass opens the only feasible deepwater outlet to the sea. No recommendation is made for legislation looking to the improvement of this waterway.
